National Palace Museum

The National Palace Museum, one of the four greatest museums in the world, was founded on the imperial collections started by the emperors of the Song dynasty(960-1279AD) and continued through the Yuan, Ming, Cing and Republican periods to the present day. Particularly significant were the contributions added from the imperial workshops during the Cing dynasty(1644-1911AD). Following the Communist victory in mainland China, the cream of the collection, about 4,000 crates,came to Taiwan in 1949 with the retreating Kuomintang forces.

Despite construction of a magnificent palatial-style museum facility on the southern slopes of Yangmingshan in the 1960s, the NPM has not been able to display more than a fraction of its collection of more than 650,000 artifacts covering "every time period from the Neolithic to the present." In fact, only about one percent can be displayed at any time. Exhibits are rotated every three months, and it is commonly held that just to see the 4,000 worldclass paintings in the NPM's posession would require continual visits for several decades.

Shilin Night Market

The Shilin Night Market is the largest night market in town and a popular evening destination for local residents and foreign tourists alike.

The food section of the market is now located in a two-story complex opposite Jiantan MRT station, whereas the many youth-fashion shops can be found in the many lanes and alleys of Wenlin Road. The food is too delicious to miss. The variey seems endless--chicken steaks, barbecued skewers of squid, beancurd specialties, stewed spare-rib soup, hotpot, deep fried scallion pancakes, flavored ice, herb tea, fried bunds filled with meat or vegetables -- the list goes on and on.

Among the two most popular items are the stir-fried cuttlefish and "little biscuit wrapped in big biscuit."
